The Voice recognises the continuing impact of our history and the exclusion of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people from the governing institutions of our society. For too long, public policy and legislation has been framed either to the explicit detriment of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, or with systemic blindness that produces grossly inequitable social and economic outcomes.

The Voice to parliament will ensure that our legislative process begins with a consideration of the impact on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. It is our generation's chance at creating a reconciled country.
